

ABSTRACT

A data is input, character by character or stroke by stroke, to form a line of text. The system looks up in a dictionary and determines a unique one in the dictionary including entered line of text data and being with (1) leading part be unique, or (2) first part and some following data be unique, or (3) stem of word and last character be unique, or stem of word and some following characters be unique, 4) first part and last part be unique, or first part and some following data be unique. No more input is necessary after finding the unique data.